Working in Parking and Traffic may have its share of horror stories, but it also can be a great deal of fun, according to Robert Rath, Parking and Traffic officer.

Rath said that some students have gone a bit far when faced with a parking violation on their windshield. Rath added that some students are tempted to take out their aggravation on him. He said that he was almost assaulted by an angry ticketee, and that he has been verbally threatened before.

Rath said that he's had other students offer him various 'gifts' trying to get out of getting the hated orange envelope containing the ticket. He has had some interesting offers, including free alcohol.

"I've been offered free drinks from students trying to get out of tickets," Rath said.

According to Rath, the Parking and Traffic officers don't get malicious joy out of giving students tickets. But it is their job to keep the parking lots in order.

Rath said that contrary to popular belief on campus, the Parking and Traffic officers are not out to make students' days horrible.

"People think we are out to get them," Rath said.

Actually, Rath said that he takes it easy on students. If a student comes out before he has finished writing the ticket, then he said he tells the student to move his vehicle.

Rath said if he has already written the ticket, nine chances out of 10, the student will get the violation.

"I'm usually pretty lenient with students," he said.

He said he's just doing his job trying to enforce parking regulations because without the parking officers, the parking lots would be out of control.

"If we weren't here, the parking lots would be a mess," Rath said.

Rath said it's neat working on campus because he meets and helps lots of people. He has made friends from helping people with broken-down vehicles.

In addition to ticketing cars and helping stranded motorists, Rath goes around to see if anyone is parked illegally. Parking in a fire lane costs students $25.00.

Rath said drivers parking in handicapped designated spaces are not ticketed. Instead the cars are towed. On his rounds, Rath said he goes to different parking lots, checking to see if vehicles are registered and parked in the right spots or in handicapped spots without proper stickers.

He also checks to see if vehicles are backed into the parking spaces.

Drivers are not allowed to back into parking spaces because the patrol officers need to see the back license plates.

Rath said students are permitted to park in 80 percent of the University parking lots. The remaining lots are reserved for University employees.

Police search for missing mother, kids

Police are searching for any trace of a Bowling Green woman and her two children who may have been abducted by the woman's ex-husband from the Woodland Mall Wednesday morning.

Kristina Lyn Anderson, 23, was last seen at Bob Evans Restaurant, 1726 E. Wooster, shortly before 11 a.m., according to Sgt. Al Alvord. Police have received no information about her whereabouts since then.

"Right now we have to assume the worst and treat this as if she's been abducted," Alvord said. "We're very concerned and hope she turns up."

Kristina and her two children, Levi, 1, and Asia Marie, 3, were reportedly picked up by a taxi along with Kristina's ex-husband James "Tiger" Anderson and taken to the restaurant.

Kristina's sister Marla Dewalt, 15049 W. Poe Road, said she believes James may have coerced Kristina to go with him by threatening to take her children.

"I think she's doing this out of love for her children," Dewalt said.

James has physically abused Kristina in the past and has a criminal record, Dewalt said. All four Andersons had lived in Oregon until four months ago when Kristina moved to Bowling Green to live with her sister.

James, who Alvord said may be emotionally unstable, may have hitchhiked to Bowling Green with the intention of taking his two children.

Dewalt said she is very concerned about Kristina's welfare.

"Call me," Dewalt wanted to urge her sister. "I'm worried and I don't know where you are. I want to know that you're all right."

Kristina and the children had no belongings with them aside from the clothes on their

Ribeau works to rebuild University foundation

Jay Young
The BG News

University President Sidney Ribeau knows what the stained glass windows and roof of the University need to look like. First, he is building the foundation.

Through a massive communication effort Ribeau said he wants to take the University away from the old organization, where things are clearly separated, to an institution working toward a common goal.

Ribeau said he has begun to move the University in that direction.

"I think we have begun the discussion to allow people to think about their positions in a different way," Ribeau said. "We are beginning to shake up some of those boxes in that graph."

In an effort to level off the working field, Ribeau is breaking the presidential tradition of just meeting with key administration members.

"The idea is to be consistent with that chart and begin to have all of those folks involved in the direction and the vision of Bowling Green State University," Ribeau said. "People work better if they have a sense of the big picture and how they fit into that."

Trustee David Bryan said he is very excited about what Ribeau has brought to the University so far.

"I have been very pleased about how he has started to create a vision wrapped around this idea of Bowling Green State University as a learning

President Sidney Ribeau introduced his vision for the University at the start of the school year. The plan is a move away from the boxed organizational chart. Ribeau said this will allow everyone to share the same vision for the University.

community," Bryan said. "I think President Ribeau's skill in involving people in the decision process will make an excellent working environment."

Ribeau said he makes a daily effort to visit others' working environment.

"On days when I'm on campus I try to pick one or two offices just to stop by and just talk to people and see what is going on," Ribeau said. "I think people talk to you about different things in different ways if you're in their space."

Ribeau said he believes people will start to feel the excitement of the process once they see students benefit from it.

"I think there is initially apprehension until you begin explaining the reasons why,"

Ribeau said. "The answer is because the left hand needs to know what the right hand is doing."

After the University community understands the structure, Ribeau said it will position the University to reach higher goals.

"I think the excitement kind of spreads and that is what you have to build on," Ribeau said. "You start with the foundation, you don't start with the roof or the stained glass windows."

Ribeau said he wants to involve all students in the process.

"I would like to eventually have some discussion groups at the president's house with students so we can talk about a number of different issues," Ribeau said.

Convicted rapist indicted Arlington resident charged with attack of BG student

Aaron Gray and Joe Boyle
The BG News

A Wood County grand jury indicted a twice-convicted rapist Wednesday for the 1993 rape of a University student.

Eric B. Pearson, 43, was indicted for rape, felonious sexual penetration and kidnapping. The charges were the result of recently-obtained DNA evidence matching Pearson's blood with a semen sample taken from the victim.

The former Arlington, Ohio, resident is accused of abducting and raping a 24-year-old University student on Aug. 27, 1993 near the corner of Pearl Street and Ordway Avenue.

A Seneca County jury sentenced Pearson on Sept. 13 to 12 to 15 years in prison for rape, attempted rape, abduction and two counts of gross sexual imposition. The charges stemmed from an April 2, 1994 attack on a Tiffin woman.

"Organized and intelligent police work have brought this serial rapist to justice, and brought us a strong case to prosecute."

Alan Mayberry

Bowling Green police detective

Pearson has been in police custody for more than a year, but a new warrant for his arrest was issued Thursday. It will be delivered to Pearson at the Seneca County Jail, where he is awaiting next week's trial for the rape of a second Tiffin woman in her home on July 14, 1994.

DNA evidence against Pearson is expected to play a big part in obtaining a conviction for the Bowling Green rape, Police Detective Ken Fortney said.

"We feel we have a very solid case," he said.

Similar DNA evidence led to Pearson's conviction for the first Tiffin rape and is expected to weigh heavily in next week's Tiffin trial.

The Bowling Green rape occurred only 2 1/2 months after Pearson was paroled from prison, where he had been since his 1981 conviction of raping a 13-year-old Wyandot County girl.

Fortney said Pearson is also a primary suspect in the attack of a 21-year-old Bowling Green woman on Sept. 23, 1993, near the corner of Manville Avenue and Scott Hamilton Street.

That victim managed to escape the assailant, but saw the man's face and was able to assist in creating a composite sketch.

Pearson is a suspect in an additional Hancock County rape. He was also found not guilty in June of raping a Kenton woman.

Wood County Prosecutor Alan Mayberry said he credits Pearson's capture to the cooperation of northwest Ohio police, particularly Bowling Green and Tiffin.

"Organized and intelligent police work have brought this serial rapist to justice, and brought us a strong case to prosecute," Mayberry said.

Fortney said he will be glad when the case finally comes to an end.

"We're always glad to close any case," Fortney said. "There's a certain sense of satisfaction that goes with it. We have a suspect and he's a very good suspect."

Assistant County Prosecutor Gary Bishop is slated to handle the case against Pearson, which will take place in Judge Gale Williamson's court. Pearson's arraignment is scheduled for Oct. 12 at 2:30 p.m.

E.A.R. to the ground

Is there some strange link to a parallel universe that exists only on North College Drive, making all cars that travel on it invisible to pedestrians? Driving on North College is like traveling on a country road in Ireland and encountering a shepherd and his flock. Hordes of students stroll obliviously in front of the alarmed motorists, who are left impotently slamming their brakes and sputtering obscenities at the herd. Maybe the only solution is barbed wire along the sidewalk.

What is the deal with the big digital clock in front of First Federal Bank, 124 E. Court St.? Throughout the summer it produced times such as 93:30 and 10:77. Now that this problem seems to be resolved, the temperature reading always seems to be a blank space with a degree symbol. As if inebriated bar patrons don't have enough to worry about on their journey home.

All the Indian fans out there know it's a great time to be a baseball fan. While we're enjoying this, though, we need to remember our good friends from Detroit. You may have noticed that they aren't having quite as good a year as the Indians are.

Before you offer your condolences, though, remember a few years back when the Tigers were really good and the Indians were really bad? We seem to remember a lot of rather smug and satisfied Tiger fans who took great joy in rubbing salt in the wound that was our team. So just remember Indians (and Reds) fans, turnabout is fair play.

Just a reminder to everyone that this is your last day to preregister for classes for the spring semester. Also, while your doing it, don't be afraid to be mean to the star lady. She's annoying, mean and totally uninterested in your welfare. So take the chance to insult her. After all, she's not even a real person.

Next Wednesday you may notice a lot of young people milling around the Union and West Hall. They're high school students here for the GLIPA journalism conference. Be nice to them. Most of them are still young and innocent and haven't been beaten down and made bitter by this University yet.

This week the new television season started. Doesn't it seem like there's only three or four really good shows on television right now? And they all seem to be on at the same time.

One more thing for you Indians fans. If you look in the 1981 record books you will find when the Yankees won the pennant it was marked with a big fat "strike shortened season." Too bad this year doesn't count.

Hookers push for peace

If only Hugh Grant would have taught me high school algebra.

The lovely Limey would dazzle a room of damsels with intimate knowledge of his pythagorean theorem. If only Hugh Grant would have taught me high school algebra, learning would be so easy.

The tall, attractive redcoat recluse might make all the girls "sine" with only a flash of his famous boyish grin. If only Hugh Grant would have taught me high school algebra, at lunchtime, we couldn't have had any pudding if we didn't eat our meat.

The mighty Brit could just apologize for his paid philandering, increase Jay Leno's ratings and we'd all forgive him. All of us except for Bobby McMahon, the foreign exchange student from Northern Ireland. But that's more about protestantism than prostitution.

If only Hugh Grant would've taught me high school algebra, my high school algebra teacher's job might be in jeopardy.

Unfortunately, Hugh Grant didn't teach me high school algebra. And my real high school algebra teacher, we'll call him the Pythagorean Pimp, is on leave for soliciting the services of an undercover cop posing as "Kelly Corner-Walker" (Now-a-days even prostitutes hyphenate their last names).

According to the Delaware Gazette, P.P., a teacher in the Olen-tangy school system for 21 years, was arrested after an attempt to solicit an undercover police officer in the Cross Country Inn in Columbus. He was fined $300 and court costs, which he promptly paid.

And that would be fair, if it was P.P.'s only payment for his transgression. But, after working at one job longer than I've been alive, this guy might get fired. And for what?

Not being attractive enough to go out and get sex without spending a couple of bucks? I don't think I've ever gotten lucky without greasing the wheels of success by buying a couple of barley-based drinks. Except for that one blind girl, but she was the exception.

And how far down does this guy really rate on the sleaziness scale? For a long time, Bob Packwood was a U.S. Senator. At least the Pythagorean Pimp paid for his. Packwood's amounts to a dine-and-dasher of sexual deviance.

You have to ask yourself, "whose really smarting from P.P.'s paid ticket to tuna town?"

Does the prostitute suffer under the burden of an oppressive male society that forces her to sell her body for money?

No, she just gets to have sex, instead of waiting tables. I would have gladly given up my job as Buffalo Wings and Rings waiter for a little paid nooky. Editors note: the closest opportunity Joe's ever had to sell his body for money is the Toledo blood bank. Unless you count the times he "buys himself" some soap at the local grocery. But that hardly counts.

Is P.P. hurt emotional, physically, or otherwise from his heinous crime?

Nope, he wears a condom and gets an orgasm. And finally, will society falter under the undue burden paid sex places on it?

I don't buy it. I guess when it comes down to it, I think prostitution is kinda like selling off childhood memorabilia. Most people don't want to sell off their Luke Skywalker action figure, but if it comes down to starving or selling off Luke -- say goodbye to the force.

Come to think of it, prostitution could really lend society a much-needed hand. Think of the implications for algebra teachers alone. No more will we have problems where a train leaves Chicago at 8:30 and another train leaves New York at 9:15.

Uh, huh. Welcome to the new prostitution-approved version of algebra. Jane walks down Thurston Avenue at two miles per hour (it's still a dirt road -- even prostitution can't hurry state workers). Halfway to the corner she meets a regular trick named "John." John says he'll meet her in two hours.

You with me here?

When she gets to the corner she meets another prostitute named "Joe" (Yes, there are male prostitutes). Since the demand for skinny white excolumnists turned prostitutes is fairly low, Joe's a little down on his luck. And he want to know if Jane will take him to lunch. Assuming it takes Jane an hour to feed "Joe," does Jane have time to take "Joe" to lunch and get back for her trick with John?

Proficiency test scores would double overnight.

Lookout we're on a roll now! Education's solved. Onward to world peace.

Howabout using prostitutes instead of soldiers to solve our nation's conflicts.

Instead of killing each other to death, we'd procreate ourselves to life.

It works like this:

Let's say we're having problems with those pesky Iraqi folks again. Just as our countries are about to come to "blows," President Clinton unveils the United States new Mary Magdalen division. Three-hundred of our finest ladies line up against the 300 of Iraq's "full-veil" division.

How do we determine a winner?

Simple, at the end of two weeks, the country with the most impregnated women, wins the war.

Think of the implications -- No more killing. No more defense budget. No more Colin Powell.

Men would be fighting to get into West Point. The word "bitch" would come to mean grunt. Prostitutes would get the respect they deserve.

And unattractive algebra teachers wouldn't get fired just because they have to pay for it.

If that's not a perfect world, I don't know what is.

Issues part of education

"BGSU is dedicated to developing men and women who exhibit wisdom, sound judgement, tolerance and respect for other people, cultures and ideas, all necessary characteristics of an educated person."

Many of you probably did not realize the University had a "mission statement," the preceding quote is an excerpt from it. No where within the entire statement does it mention getting a job, mastering an occupation, or filling a niche within the labor force of this country.

Last Thursday's guest columnist, Kate Griffin, would have the students and educators at the University believe college is merely a breeding ground for workers, a necessary resource to keep the capitalist machine grinding.

Besides misinterpreting the purpose of education, Griffin takes pot shots at President Clinton, Affirmative Action (mistakenly referred to as 'quotas'), environmental and health safety laws (mistakenly referred to as government beauracracy or regulations), and women's studies (mistakenly referred to as a 'fad').

Griffin, along with the latest wave of conservatives, slyly suggests a link between government beauracracy, over regulation of big business, and poor post-graduate placement on that evil entity known as 'political correctness,' with attention to growth in the area of women's studies.

In her attempt, she uses arbitrary statistics and faulty reasoning.

Griffin begins by stating "...50 percent of those who graduated from college in May still cannot find jobs appropriate for their degrees." What are their degrees in? What percent of those jobless decided to go on to graduate studies or other pursuits?

Guest Columnist

Andrea Wood

She went on to say "...[universities and colleges] are focusing on fads such as women's studies rather than spending limited resources on core academic subjects."

First, thousands of students who rely on federal financial aid can kiss much of those 'limited resources' goodbye thanks to Griffin's cohorts seated in the 104th Congress.

Second, according to Webster's Third New International Dictionary, a 'fad' is: 1. a pursuit or interest followed usually widely but briefly and capriciously with exaggerated zeal and devotion.

I can assure Griffin that the study of women and their struggles and accomplishments has been neither brief nor capricious. The University recently celebrated the 75th anniversary of women's suffrage.

Even the United Nations is getting in on this 'fad' called equality.

Griffin stated, "...multicultural and politically correct courses supplant classes that have practical value for future employment."

One woman's impracticality is another's reality.

I suggest Griffin expand her research beyond the realm of personal vendetta. Women's studies, ethnic studies, and other minority-focused courses offer valuable perspectives which challenge us to notice our personal, economical, educational, political, and moral decisions, and to examine how those decisions affect or oppress our fellow Homo Sapiens.

"Women's studies, ethnic studies, and other minority-focused courses offer valuable perspectives which challenge us to notice our personal, economical, educational, political, and moral decisions, and to examine how those decisions affect or oppress our fellow Homo Sapiens."

In her editorial, Griffin said "...as a result of new and existing regulations, the jobs students have counted on are just not there."

Griffin has set a new record for straw-grabbing. How can important government restrictions, those which protect our environment (and therefore us), be so astutely tied to a competitive job market?

Griffin said "...est'mates show regulations costing the U.S. economy over $500 billion annually." Where in the heck did she get this number? And may I just say Thank goodness someone is regulating something.

Politics and social issues are as important to our ever-governed lives as the three R's. It is the mission of a college or university to produce intelligent, critically thinking individuals, not mere worker ants for the country's labor force, as suggested by Griffin.

If colleges and universities become trade schools to feed the labor quota, we have no alternative but to become a no-see-um no-think-um society.

"...colleges being nothing but grooming schools for the middle-class non identity which usually finds its perfect expression on the outskirts of the campus in rows of well-to-do houses with lawns and television sets in each living room with everybody looking at the same thing and thinking the same thing at the same time..." Jack Kerouac, The Dharma Burns entourage were delayed on the tarmac for several hours early today by snow and a lack of de-icing equipment.

Clinton entourage delayed by snow

DENVER - President Clinton and members of his three-plane

The late summer storm left up to 9 inches of snow in the Denver area Wednesday night. Air Force One sat on the runway at Buckley Air National Guard Base awaiting de-icing trucks from Denver International Airport, several miles away.

Air Force Two, carrying Vice President Al Gore, and a press plane were also delayed.

Clinton's plane finally took off at 1:55 a.m. -- about an hour after Gore and nearly four hours later than scheduled. The press plane took off about 1:30 a.m.

"Thanks for the first snow," he told a group of photographers and reporters as he left.

The next stop on Clinton's fund-raising and campaign warm-up tour is San Francisco.

Maj. Michael Yowell said the base has only one de-icing truck, which wasn't enough to handle all three planes.

It doesn't seem like summer in Nebraska

The calendar says it's still summer, but don't tell that to residents of the Nebraska Panhandle. Up to 8 inches of snow fell.

The snowfall was part of a cold front that broke records across the Plains and Rockies, bringing snowfall Wednesday and early today as far south as the Texas Panhandle and temperatures as low as the teens. More cold weather was forecast for tonight.

In some places, it was the first time on record that snow fell in summer.

A crash on a snowy road was blamed for the death of a Nebraska woman, and falling branches caused scattered power outages across the region.

President Clinton, who was visiting Colorado, got a taste of winter. The president's plane was nearly four hours late leaving Buckley Air National Guard Base near Denver, where 9 inches of

The hardest-hit part of Nebraska was the northern Panhandle.

Greek Week activities designed to promote unity

"Reaching for the Stars" is the theme of this year's annual Greek Week, which takes place Sept. 23-29. The week's events are sponsored by Interfraternity and Panhellenic councils.

David Banks, IFC Greek Week chairman, said there are many different events that everyone is welcome to attend.

"My main purpose this year was to create something people would want to do," he said. "I wanted to bring everyone together to have a good time."

Brian Perry, IFC vice president for internal affairs, said the week is an opportunity for the different Greek chapters to do things together.

"Greek Week gives fraternities and sororities a new way to interact with one another and to promote unity," he said.

The different Greek chapters at the University are paired up during Greek Week and divided into different teams. The teams are responsible for getting participation and points will be awarded based on the participation, Perry said.

Greek Week kicks off on Saturday with a barbeque and Greek Olympics sponsored by Hot 'N' Now. The barbeque will run from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and there will be free food and activities, including a dunking booth and a three-legged race.

"The barbeque is a kick off to the week and is a time for everyone to get together," Banks said.

On Sunday, there is a community service project with the different Greek chapters meeting at the University Union at about 12:45 p.m. and will pick up trash around campus. "We are trying to clean up campus and make it look a little better,"

Banks said. "Some people take for granted that the trash will get picked up."

Monday night, Mary Peterson, a motivational speaker from Iowa State, will have a presentation in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom at 9 p.m.

"Peterson talks about making things happen for yourself, not waiting for things to happen to you," Banks said.

Also during the speaker Monday night, there will be Order of Omega tappings, Perry said.

"Order of Omega is the national leadership honorary society for Greeks," Perry said. Sporting events will take place Sept. 26 and Sept. 27 with single elimination tournaments for blind volleyball and kickball. The sporting events will take place in the grassy area between Ols-camp Hall and Anderson Arena and will begin at 4:30 p.m.

Banks said the teams for the tournaments will be co-ed and made up of eight members. During the blind volleyball tournament, there will be a sheet up over the net so players cannot see where the ball is coming from.

"I figured this would be more fun than regular volleyball because it is something a little different," he said. "I am hoping for a big response."

The week will wind down on Sept. 28 with a talent show at Anderson Arena from 9:30 p.m. to 11:30 p.m.

There will also be awards presented during the evening for the most spirit and the overall winners of Greek Week, based on the point totals.

Banks said he would encourage all students to come to the events, not just the Greek community.

"I believe there is something to gain from everything, so non-Greeks can come see what is going on, meet people, and have fun," he said.

He also said some people may have stereotypic views of Greeks and this is an opportunity for Greeks to show they are not like that.

Author to speak about novel, disabled people

John Wenzel
The BG News

An award-winning disabled author who writes about people with disabilities will visit the University to read from her newest novel, "Bone Truth" today.

Anne Finger, a creative writing professor at Wayne State University in Michigan, said she hopes to "present the lives of disabled people in all their complexity."

Finger said she hopes the immediacy of reading to a live audience will give her writing a personal quality.

Paula Lambert-Neidigh, a graduate student in the creative writing program at the University, coordinated bringing Finger to the University to read.

Lambert-Neidigh said although the visiting writer series is an ongoing established program, this is the first time she has ever personally coordinated such an event.

"We were looking for authors from the general area," Lambert-Neidigh said. "People were very interested in [Anne Finger's] work and her background with disability issues." In addition to Finger's 8 p.m. reading at Prout Chapel, she will lead individual writing workshops with students in the Master of Fine Arts program.

"We hope there's a good crowd," Lambert-Neidigh said. "Anne Finger is a really interesting writer with an interesting life."

Ohio committee discovers more prisoner deaths

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- A legislative oversight committee examining a series of state prisoner deaths says it has discovered two additional deaths.

Although prison deaths are usually reported to the Correctional Institution Inspection Committee, such reports are not mandatory. Deaths on state property are investigated by the State Highway Patrol.

Lawmakers said Wednesday both deaths were at Marion Correctional Institution. The dead prisoners were identified as Ivory Leon Spears, 46, of Akron, who died of a heart attack in February, and Jose LaBoy, 30, of Cleveland, who died in March after suffering apparent head injuries.

Spears' death led to the recent discharge of a prison nurse accused of failing to provide prompt care.

Committee members said the deaths of five other inmates at state institutions in the last two years also went unreported to the committee.

"People are dying in prison, and I think it is being swept under the rug," state Sen. Dennis Kucinich, D-Cleveland, said. His office is conducting an investigation into LaBoy's death. "Just because these people are prisoners and they die, nobody cares."

The committee, which is responsible for monitoring activities at the prisons, has often functioned as a link between prisoners' families and the system.

"A lot of these families don't know who to call and how to get information," said Peter Davis, executive director of the committee. "They just want to satisfy themselves as to what happened."

State prisons spokesman Joe Andrews said the lack of reporting to the committee was an error that will be corrected.

Temporary 'kid dumping' becoming common

Christine Wolff
The Cincinnati Enquirer

CINCINNATI -- "Will Matthew's mother come to the front desk?"

The intercom announcement vies for attention with the noise of customers talking and the harmonies of the latest CD playing at Borders Books & Music in Springdale.

Minutes pass. Still no sign of Matthew's mother.

Borders' clerks start searching restrooms. Someone gets a soda for sobbing Matthew, who was found -- alone and wailing for Mom -- in the children's section of the 35,000-square-foot store.

So where's Matthew's mother? Browsing obliviously among the mystery books, half a store away.

It's another temporary kid dumping -- children, toddlers as well as preteens, left alone for several minutes to a couple hours by parents who assume store employees will take over supervision.

And it's a scenario that frustrated store clerks say happens often enough to prompt concern. Unattended children -- long the bane of public librarians and movie ushers -- have gone retail.

Newsweek magazine pegs the trend "stealth baby-sitting."

The Wall Street Journal says the "baby-sitting syndrome" is the marketing dilemma of the '90s.

Parents caught in the act "are sort of embarrassed they left the child unattended. Some get mad at the child because they told them to be quiet and stay put," said Cylon Woods, a Borders assistant manager who says it happens two or three times a week during the summer months.

Joseph-Beth Booksellers' Lexington store sits adjacent to a movie theater, a juxtaposition climbs a bookcase and gets hurt or somebody swipes them." Kid-dumping isn't illegal, and cases of unattended and lost children are handled by mall security, who call police on the rare occasion when parents can't be quickly located.

"The parents made a bad judgment and usually the fact that a uniformed officer is there makes that point," Vollmar said.

Besides bookstores, other attractive kid-dumping sites include computer stores, where high-tech kids can spend hours clicking a mouse, and hands-on toy stores, where youngsters play before parents buy.

Alleged abductor arrested

The Associated Press

TROY, Ohio -- A man suspected in abductions of women from Wal-Mart parking lots in Arkansas and Alabama has been arrested.

Willard Gene Thomas, 53, of Choctaw, Ark., was arrested Wednesday at a rest area on Interstate 75 in west-central Ohio, authorities said. Police made the arrest after a license plate check revealed the car Thomas was in had been stolen in Alabama.

Sgt. Doug Bradley of the Miami County Sheriff's Department in Ohio said Thomas was asleep when he and another officer approached his car. Thomas did not resist arrest. Officers found a loaded .380-caliber handgun under a book on the front passenger seat, Bradley said.

A license check showed Thomas was wanted on kidnapping, sexual assault and burglary charges. He was held Wednesday night in the Miami County Jail.

Police consider Thomas a suspect in abductions of two women at gunpoint on Wal-Mart parking lots in Conway, Ark. and Morrilton, Ark. and a third woman's abduction Tuesday from a Wal-Mart parking lot in Jasper, Ala.

After the Alabama incident, officers found the suspect's vehicle, with an Arkansas license plate, nearby.

"Due to the similarities of the location, the way he operated and other evidence ... we're reasonably sure it's going to be the same suspect" in all three incidents. Lt. Mark Elsingher of the Conway Police Department said.

Thomas was convicted of rape in St. Clair County, Ala., and sentenced to 40 years in 1980, according to a spokeswoman in the Alabama prison system. Thomas was released in March 1994 after serving nearly 14 years.

An 18-year-old woman told Conway police that a man put a pistol into her side Friday and forced her into a car. She said the man threatened to kill her if she created a disturbance. The man also told her he had committed the same type of crime before, she said. They drove to a dirt road near Menifee, where he raped her, she said.

In Morrilton, a man stuck a gun in a woman's side Sunday as she sat behind the wheel of her pickup truck in a Wal-Mart parking lot with her daughter by her side, said Morrilton Police investigator Phillip Quinn.

The man told the woman that he would kill her daughter if she didn't scoot over and let him drive.

Man jailed for involvement in child's murder

Dinos Lambropoulos
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES -- A gang member on parole for manslaughter was jailed today in the slaying of a 3-year-old killed when the car she was riding in took a wrong turn onto a gang-infested dead-end street.

Vincent Caldera, 23, a reputed member of the "Avenues" street gang, was arrested late Wednesday at his home near the shooting scene, Police Chief Willie Williams said. He was jailed for investigation of murder.

Police hope to arrest several others associated with the gang, Williams said.

Caldera, booked on one count of murder and five counts of attempted murder, "is viewed in the community as one of the most vicious, vile members of the Avenues gang," Williams said.

He said Caldera had bargained an earlier murder case down to manslaughter and served three years in prison before his release.

"Hopefully, he won't be able to negotiate his way down to a manslaughter and parole this time," Williams said.

A SWAT team served a search warrant at 1 a.m. today at Caldera's home on Isabel Drive, the street where the shooting occurred Sunday. Williams declined to comment on what was found at the yellow stucco house with a rusting horse trailer in the yard.

The slain girl, Stephanie Kuhn, was in a car returning from a barbecue early Sunday when the driver strayed onto the dead-end street in the Cypress Park neighborhood. In an unprovoked attack, the car was surrounded by street thugs who blocked the driver's way out and opened fire.

The driver of the car, Timothy Stone, and Stephanie's younger brother, 2-year-old Joseph, were wounded.

Williams said Caldera was believed to be one of those who had fired shots.

Caldera's girlfriend, Nora Carillo, 17, said she has receipts and will soon have photos to prove they were in Northern California all weekend. Carillo said Caldera, the father of a baby she is expecting in January, cried when she spoke to him after his arrest.

"We were out of town when all of this happened, and they're trying to say he killed this little girl," she told reporters outside his home.

WASHINGTON -- Directly at odds with the government's account of Ruby Ridge, a former top Justice Department official said Thursday he recalls being told by the FBI early in the 1992 siege that the 14-year-old son of white separatist Randy Weaver had been shot.

The official revealed that on the first Saturday of the standoff he was told that Vicki Weaver had been overheard "wailing" about the shooting of her son.

Mrs. Weaver herself was shot and killed by an FBI sniper later the same day in a chaotic showdown that has prompted Senate

The government has said it did not learn that Sammy Weaver had been shot during a gun battle with U.S. deputy marshals until his body was found in a shed on Sunday evening, Aug. 23, 1992, the third day of the standoff in Idaho.

But a former associate deputy attorney general, Jeffrey Howard, said in an interview he believes he learned of the boy's shooting 36 hours earlier during a conversation with top FBI officials.

In fact, Justice Department phone logs obtained by The Associated Press this week show that top officials of the Bush Justice Department had at least 20 contacts concerning Ruby Ridge in the 24 hours before Mrs. Weaver was shot. Two calls involved Attorney General William Barr.

Dewalt dropped the three off at the mall at 10:30 a.m. and made arrangements to pick them up later.

Kristina was last seen wearing a black sweatshirt with light-colored stripes, black pants and white Reebok shoes.

Beware of the big, fat punters

As if any extra incentive is needed, Falcon coach Gary Blackney has a few mementos from last year's Las Vegas Bowl III on his desk this week.

Remember that game? The game Central Michigan went to and Bowling Green didn't, thanks to a 36-33 upset of the Falcons in the season finale?

Blackney has a black, gray-billed cap with "Las Vegas Bowl III" stitched in blue across the front.

He also has a white mini-football with the same symbol -- and a little something extra:

On the opposite side from the symbol, in messy black cursive, reads "Craig Fischer, #44".

It was Fischer, you see, who drove the dagger in Falcon hearts with his 73-yard touchdown run on a fake punt. And it's been Fischer's pudgy frame rumbling down the field that has kept Blackney up many nights since.

"I still think every night about that big, fat punter running down the field and falling in the end zone," Blackney said during the preseason.

"This reminds me of what could have been," Blackney said this week, holding up the cap and football. "It's fuel for the future."

"He showed us the football," quarterback Ryan Henry said. "It's not as if we need any more motivation than we already have."

Central Michigan has beaten Bowling Green the past two years, each time by a field goal. Each time, the loss has left the Falcons at home come December, watching another MAC team enjoy the sun and fun in Las Vegas.

The Chippewas are the only MAC team to ever defeat Blackney in his five seasons.

All that will make for some very unhappy Falcons come Saturday.

Granted, the Chippewas lost just about everybody off last year's MAC title squad, but Mount Pleasant has not been a very fun place for the Falcons to play in recent history. They have won there just once in the past six visits, in 1992.

And with the weather expected to be straight out of winter -- snow is not out of the question 200 miles into Michigan this weekend -- it could make for an interesting afternoon of football.

Last weekend was a joke. Akron was a horrendous football team. This week we'll see just what this Bowling Green team is made of.

But, beware of the big, fat punters.

Pick: Falcons, but a pair of touchdowns.

Volleyball team opens home schedule

Jeremy Yohe
The BG News

The Bowling Green volleyball team finally gets to play a match at home after a month of being on the road. The Falcons host Kent and Akron in Mid-American competition Friday and Saturday respectively at Memorial Hall.

Matches for both start at 7:00 p.m.

Kent (9-2 overall 2-0 MAC) will be bringing in a vastly improved team from last year's 6-25 squad. The Golden Flashes' are coming off a huge win over the MAC preseason favorite Central Michigan.

BG swept the two matches last year with Kent winning in straight sets in both.

Akron will prove to be another stern test in Saturday's match. The Zips' carry a 5-4 overall mark and stand 1-1 in the MAC. Akron won the George Washington Labor Day Tournament three weeks ago. BG also stands at 5-4 overall (1-1 MAC).

"The fact that we've been on the road for the first nine matches, it is key to now come out and be sharp, crisp, and play well in front of our fans," head coach Denise Van De Walle said about the first home match.

Despite being in the comforts of home, coach Van De Walle feels these matches hold a great deal of importance.

"We need to win our matches at home, no doubt. If you want to be in the conference tournament at the end of the year, you have to win all [your matches] at home and most of them on the road."

To strengthen their attack, the team has been working on a more aggressive attack.

"We are putting some more emphasis on our offense and making sure it doesn't break down," Van De Walle said. "We are trying to get some more people to hit the ball harder."

"The best thing for us to be doing is to be hitting smart and make sure we get a variety of shots."

Coach Van De Walle explains that the teams focus won't be on the other teams, but on themselves.

"We are more concerned with what we are doing on our side on the net than what our opponents are doing," Van De Walle said.

"I'd like to see a total team effort."

Time for a payback

Falcons have score to settle with CMU

Scott Brown
The BG News

It's pay-back time.

Central Michigan, Bowling Green's thorn-in-the-side for the past two seasons, is the opponent this week as the Falcons look to stay undefeated in MAC play.

The emphasis being put on this game by the Bowling Green camp is easy to understand: two losses to the Chippewas the past two years are probably all that have stood between BG and four consecutive MAC titles dating back to 1991.

"Toledo is our traditional rival, but everyone is aware of the fact that Central is the team that has beaten us," BG head coach Gary Blackney said. "They are the first team to beat us at home, and that's significant."

The pain of last year's loss has been particularly acute. The Chippewas handed the Falcons their first home loss under Blackney with the 36-33 win in last year's finale, made even more memorable by punter Craig Fischer's 73-yard touchdown run on a fake kick.

"I watched the game from last year [Tuesday] and you're just left with a sick feeling,"

Henry said. "It all just comes back to you when you watch the tape and start talking about Central again. I think everybody is going to be ready to play."

Henry will be ready to play after missing last week's rout of Akron with a bruised shoulder. He had no trouble in practice on Tuesday and Blackney declared him as the starter again.

"I threw [Tuesday] quite a bit with no pain and that was good," Henry said. "That was the first day I've thrown in a little over a week."

"I've been playing for three years. I would hate to think that there is going to be a mental problem preparing for a game. If I can get over that first game, I can get over just about anything."

Each of the past two games -- both CMU wins -- have been decided by a field goal. Bowling Green is just 1-5 in their past six visits to Mount Pleasant. They did win there, 17-14, in 1992.

"Especially with last year, we feel we kind of gave the game away," said linebacker Jason Woullard. "We had a chance to put them away and we didn't do it. We definitely feel we have a score to settle."

As for Central Michigan, few of the players from last year's MAC title team remain. A total of 15 starters moved on, leaving Bowling Green running back Keylan Cates (32) looks for daylight during last week's 50-12 win over Akron. Cates didn't have much trouble finding that daylight in the game, rushing for a career-high 186 yards. The Falcons take on Central Michigan on Saturday.

Cross country to host Brodt Invitational

Steve Wildman
The BG News

If you want to see Bowling Green cross country at home this season, Saturday will be your only chance. Bowling Green will host the 9th annual Mel Brodt Cross Country Invitational.

The meet will bring in teams from Akron, Ashland, Bluffton, Cincinnati, Concordia, Defiance, Heidelberg, Northern Illinois, Ohio Northern, Wayne State and Wright State.

The invitational will start at the southwest corner of the intramural field and ends at the outdoor running track. The women's 5,000 meter race will start at 11:00 a.m. The men's 10,000 meter race starts at 11:40 a.m. There is an open race for anyone wanting to run that starts at 12:20 p.m. Spectators are encouraged to take positions on top of golf course hill because that provides the best view of the race.

The Invitational meet is named after and ran in honor of Mel Brodt. Brodt was men's track and cross country coach at Bowling Green for 25 years who retired in 1986. He was named the NCAA Indoor track coach of the year in 1972.

During his tenure at Bowling Green, Brodt coached 25 All-American athletes. Brodt's presence in Bowling Green is still felt because one of the All-Americans he coached is men's cross country and track coach, Sid Sink. Sink was named All-American ten times during his running career at Bowling Green.

"Coach Brodt was a big influence on me. He was responsible for my running career and how I do things as a coach," Sink said. "I am glad that we were able to get a meet named after

The Falcon soccer team has traveled over 720 miles since last Thursday. Along the way they have picked up two wins and their first loss of the season.

Bowling Green, standing at 5-1, concludes the week's pilgrimage with a 325-mile jaunt south to Bowling Green, Ky. to face Western Kentucky Sunday.

"We have done a lot of traveling," said BG head coach Mel Mahler. "To travel two hours yesterday and come back today then have to play Sunday our legs may be heavy."

"You get really tired," said Falcon mid-fielder Steve Klein. "But it's good that we come away with victories on away fields."

Golfers looking for wins

Men headed north for Michigan Intercollegiate

Brad Beebe
The BG News

After finishing seventh last weekend, the men's golf team will try and improve on that place this weekend when they travel to Ann Arbor, Mich. for the U of M Wolverine Intercollegiate. This is the second tournament this fall for Bowling Green.

"This will be the toughest tournament we will play in all fall," said Falcon head coach Todd Brunsink.

Competing this weekend will be nine Big Ten, six Mid-American Conference and some District IV teams. The tournament includes Minnesota, Northwestern, Iowa, Eastern Michigan, Ohio and Akron.

Brunsink anticipates Minnesota, Northwestern, and Iowa to be the top teams challenging in this tournament.

"We are looking forward to playing in this tough field and gaining valuable experience," Brunsink said.

Cold, wet weather is predicted for this weekend.

"I anticipate scores for the field being higher than normal,"

Brunsink said. "It is a very large and hilly golf course, and how well we putt will help determine how we do."

Competing for the Falcons this weekend will be Mike Kotnik, Ed Niemi, Otto Larson, Scott Caswell, and captain Jason Carbone. Mike Kotnik and Ed Niemi led the Falcons last weekend.

Carbone discussed the golf course and how to attack it.

"It is a really tough golf course. The greens roll well, and that should be to our advantage."

"We are looking to have a solid tournament," Carbone added.

Women looking to improve at Ferris State Invite

Brad Beebe
The BG News

This weekend, Bowling Green will participate in the Ferris State Invitational against 14 Division I and II schools from the Midwest.

"We will play a field of smaller school programs," said head coach Todd Brunsink.

This is the Falcons' third tournament this fall and last one on the road until Oct. 8 and 9. Hopefully, experience should play a role this weekend since the Falcons have competed here last year. "This is a challenging course, but we can all shoot well here," said co-captain Heather Lantz.

Since the Falcons are accustomed to battling the BG winds in practice, they should be prepared for the cold, windy forecast projected.

"We have had a real good week of practice this week," Brunsink said. "We are looking forward to improving this weekend."

Participating in this 36 hole event spanning two days will be Amy Miller, Heidi Hansen and Jamie Jones, and captains

Heather Lantz and Sue Brenner. Hansen and Jones finished one and two overall for the Falcons last weekend. Sue Brenner returns this week after not playing at Michigan State.

Heather Lantz talked about the influence her co-captain has had on this team.

"She is a very consistent and experience player. She is the leader on the team," Lantz said.

The Falcons have practiced on their short game to prepare for this weekend's invitational.

Women's tennis hoping to build off last week

William Sanderson
The BG News

After opening their season strongly in the West Virginia Invitational, the Falcon women's tennis team will make a trip down the road to Columbus for the Ohio Intercollegiate this weekend.

The Ohio Intercollegiate, hosted by Ohio State University, will have a field of eight teams, including Kenyon, Toledo, Akron, Xavier, Cincinnati, Miami and Ohio State.

The Falcons are keeping their goals on the conservative side. This weekend they are expecting to have a more difficult time with the likes of powerful Miami and OSU in the tournament.

"The overall competition will be tougher this weekend than it was last weekend, and so we hope to get to some semi-finals and perhaps a final or two," said head coach Penny Dean.

For the most part the Falcons will be seeded the same way they were last weekend. The exception will be in flight B doubles team of Cassidy Landes and Jenny Cheung. Cheung will be replaced by freshman Arantxa Gomez. Cheung will still play singles.

Arantxa Gomez will be playing in her first intercollegiate tournament. Gomez is the Falcons' top newcomer, and Dean has high hopes that she'll develop into a top player.

For those interested in attending the tournament, it will be held at the OSU varsity courts Friday, Saturday and Sunday, beginning at 9:00 am. In case of inclement weather, the proceedings will be moved to the Racquet Club of Columbus.

With the extensive travel and amount of games Mahler said that BG may have to rely on a deeper bench this weekend.

"We still have a lot of flexibility, nothing is really etched in stone," Mahler said. "That gives us a comfortable feeling as a staff that we have guys on the bench with ability."

Mahler has called on forwards Jamie Harmon, Brandon Pelton and Dave Kindl off the bench on a consistent basis so far this year. Harmon and Pelton slide between the mid-field and forward spots to help relieve the BG middle.

But after the wear on the Falcon starters Mahler hopes to play some players who have worked hard in practice.

"We have a lot of experience on the bench. We have a lot of guys who have games under their belt," Mahler said. "It's a tough dilemma for a coach because who have to reward the players for their hard work in practice."

Mahler found getting playing time for all his players is the hardest thing he has encountered as the new head coach.

"That's probably the most difficult decision a coach has is giving everyone their just reward without weakening the effort of the team on the field," he said.

The Hilltoppers come in from the high country, playing a tournament in Colorado Springs, Col., last weekend. WKU lost to Air Force and beat San Diego State.

BG pounded WKU 5-1 at Mickey Cochrane Field last year. Heading the Hilltoppers is fifth-year senior forward Mark Robson, who missed all of last year with an injury.

"He [Robson] has been their leading goal scorer and front runner as they have him playing in the sweep," Mahler added.

Mahler expected WKU to play an up-tempo attack style.

"They are very aggressive and attack up field," he said. "I expect it to be more like a fast-break basketball game."

"They're going to have some good talent, we've kind of beat up on them the last few years so I think they'll be ready to play," Klein said.

The Mel Brodt Invitational is a chance for the men's team to come back from a poor performance at Akron. Sink originally viewed Akron as the team to beat, but with the loss of two of their top runners, Akron's role as main competition to Bowling Green is handed to Cincinnati.

"Cincinnati has a good team, but the way we have been running the 10k in practice, we should win the meet," Sink said.

Like most sports, home is going to be an advantage for BG cross country.

"We know exactly how to run this course and the home crowd can really push the team," Sink said.

Ashland is going to be the main concern for the women's team and Head Coach Steve Price.

The Mel Brodt Invitational is going to be special meet for Coach Price.

Club soccer team opens with wins

Brett Thompson
The BG News

The Bowling Green men's club soccer team opened their season with a pair of hard-fought victories against Dayton and Miami.

Although they played under the lights on Friday night at Dayton, both teams had trouble lighting up the scoreboard. The Falcons found themselves locked in a defensive struggle, as neither team could take control of the game. BG took only four first half shots on goal and at half the teams were scoreless.

The Falcons dominated the second half from the start, but could not capitalize on several scoring chances. The Falcons dodged a bullet in the 75th minute when goalkeeper Brian Salco made a leaping save of a hard shot that was destined for the back of the net.

This was a wake up call for the offense as they answered minutes later with a goal. Chris Rohner took a pass from Brian Lancz and scored the game winner. The defense, anchored by John Hazlett, Darren Rigel, Jeff Shively, Brett Thompson and Lancz was superb in preserving the shutout.

"Our defense really shut down the Dayton attack," said midfielder Nathan Lee. "I don't think they allowed a shot in the second half."

Against Miami, the Falcon offense came to life with a 3-2 victory. BG struck first when Bryan Dickson headed in a cross from Lancz early in the game. Brian Harringhouse followed this with an incredible goal from twenty-five yards out to give BG a 2-0 lead.

This lead would not last long, though, as Miami stormed back to tie the game late in the match. The Falcons won it with another dramatic goal by Paco Cabrera, who scored on a dazzling header off a cross from Rigel. Eric Stzul got the win in goal.

"I was impressed with the way our team played, especially since it was our first two games," said Stzul. "We showed a lot of integrity and a lot of heart after Miami came back to tie it."

BG hosts the Bowling Green Club Soccer Classic on Saturday and Sunday at the fields next to the stadium. The Falcons play at 9 a.m., 11:40 a.m., 2:20 p.m., and 5:00 p.m.

Kent takes on West Virginia

Matt Harvey
The Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. -- West Virginia coach Don Nehlen is serving notice he wants no more gift-wrapped scores for Mountaineer opponents.

Nehlen need look no further than his team's 11 turnovers in three games to find solutions to a 1-2 start.

"If you beat us, beat us," Nehlen said. "I'm not interested in giving games away and the kids know I'm not very happy with them."

"The (Purdue) game we wrapped in a red ribbon and stuck a rose in it," he said. "The (Maryland) game we wrapped in two ribbons and stuck a dozen roses in it."

And now comes Mid-American Conference foe Kent (1-1-1), which plays West Virginia on Saturday at Mountaineer Field.

Kent Coach Jim Corrigan said the Golden Flashes "have every opportunity to go down there and if we play with our heart and our soul, we will be competitive. I'm not taking this week off. I'm preparing to win."

SCORE

ing coach Dick Flynn with an unexperienced bunch.

The Chippewas are 1-1 on the season, having beaten Weber State at home and lost by 13 to East Carolina on the road. This will be CMU's MAC opener.

"I don't know if there is any magic formula or secret to our success," said CMU coach Dick Flynn. "I think our players look forward to playing Bowling Green and I think vice versa it's the same way. We've been fortunate that a couple times the score has gone our way."

Bowling Green is set on turning those fortunes around come Saturday.

"We started talking about it after the Akron game in the locker room," Henry said. "This is by far a red-letter game on our schedule. They are the only team that has beaten us. They are the big bully on the playground when you were little and you can't ever seem to beat this guy."

"They've had our number the past two years and we want ... revenge. I think we take it personally that they are the only [MAC] team to beat us in two years."

Women's rugby earns first win

The BG News

The newly rebuilt women's rugby team showed immense potential as the new season got underway this past weekend. The team got off to a good start by defeating Wittenberg 19-0.

Coach Dallas Black was happy about the win.

"The pack dominated. They won the game for us."

Pack members Heather Ekey and Jennifer Seech provided the bulk of the scoring. Ekey had two tries while Seech had one try. Robin Johnson connected on two of three conversion kicks to complete the BG scoring attack.

In the B game, BG and Wittenberg fought to a 0-0 tie. Sharon Trsek made a spectacular game-saving open field tackle to thwart the only Wittenberg offensive drive.

The rugby team would like to thank Coach Dallas Black for his efforts and patience, and Roger Mazzarella, the men's rugby coach, for showing his genuine concern for the success of the women's rugby team and for offering his services to better the team.

This weekend the team travels to Dayton to face the University of Dayton and Ohio Wesleyan.

PLACEMENT SCHEDULE

Bowling Green State University
Career Services
Campus Recruitment Calendar
For the weeks of:
October 2 and October 9, 1995

Scheduling On-Campus Interviews:
Interview sign-ups for the recruiting period October 2 - 13, 1995 will begin with Advanced Job Hunters Sign-up on Monday, September 25 at 5pm and continue through Tuesday at 4pm. Beginning at 5pm on Tuesday, September 26, any registered student and alumnus may access the sign-up system for General Sign-ups. It is recommended that students who have received letters of invitation for Pre-Selection Interviews wait until Wednesday, September 27 at 5pm to select your reserved interview time. Refer to the instructions for pre-selection sign-up on pages 12 - 13 of the Career Search Manual. All interview schedules remain on-line until two days prior to the organization's visit. A message not available for sign-ups indicates that a schedule is off-line. In this instance, please call the office directly at 372-2356 to schedule an interview appointment.

Accessing the Placement System:
1. Dial 372-9899. (You must be registered with Resume Expert Plus)
(You will hear:)

1. If you wish to schedule an appointment with a visiting employer, press the 1 key. If you would like to hear Placement News, press the 2 key.
2. Press the 3 key if you have been pre-selected by an employer. Press the 4 key to access the Alumni VP Service. Press the 5 key to hear your confirmed appointments. Press the star (*) key to quit.

2. Press 1 to schedule an interview or Press 3 when you have been pre-selected by an employer.

3. Enter your Identification Number. (The number you used on your Resume Expert Plus disk).

4. Enter the seven-digit schedule number for the employer with whom you would like to schedule an interview (this number is located on the Campus Recruiting Calendar, to the left of the position title).

5. If you have entered a valid number the system will play the message:
You have selected (name of organization), if this is correct press the pound (#) key to continue or the star (*) key to choose another organization.

6. Bring a copy of your Placement Data Sheet on high quality resume paper within 48 hours to the Sign-up Room adjacent to the Career Services' reception area, 360 Saddle Creek Student Services Building. Place your data sheet on the top shelf of the employer's mailbox. Please take any available recruiting literature which was forwarded by the organization and review the employer's file in the Center for Career Resources prior to your interview. Failure to submit your Placement Data Sheet within 48 hours may result in your removal from the interview schedule without notification.

Please remember: if you are unable for any reason to sign-up for an interview, you will be asked whether you wish to add your name to the Waiting List. Students are encouraged to get on Waiting Lists. Should the employer send another recruiter or modify the position requirements (i.e. lower the GPA requirements), you will be notified directly for an interview. You must also submit a Placement Data Sheet for every Waiting List.

Consult the Career Services' homepage (<http://www.bgsu.edu/offices/careers/index.html>) or listen to Placement News (press 2) to keep informed of changes or additions to interview schedules, or other Career Services programs.

Cancellation of Interview Appointments:
Cancellation of an interview must be reported in person to the Career Services no later than 5pm one week (7 full days) before the interview day. Complete a cancellation card in the Sign-up Room of Career Services. You can not cross your name off an interview schedule. Late cancellations will result in forfeiture of sign-up privileges for the next recruiting period. No Show Policy: No-shows are missed interview appointments. Employers become very upset when students miss their scheduled appointments which harms BGSU's reputation in the market place. The penalty for a no-show is immediate suspension of your sign-up privileges for the next recruiting period. To reinstate your sign-up privileges, you are required to write a letter of apology to the employer for missing the interview, bring this letter along with an addressed, stamped envelope, and meet with a staff member to explain your behavior. Any student who "no-shows" twice will be denied interviewing privileges for the remainder of the academic year.

Notice of Citizenship Requirements: If an employer is willing to interview international students, this will be noted in the position requirements.

The system will now verify that you meet the requirements, as specified by the employer. If you meet the requirements by the employer, you can proceed. Otherwise, the system will play a message which explains why you are unable to sign-up with the employer. Should you wish to be considered by this employer, add your name to the Waiting List and submit a copy of your Placement Data Sheet.

5. Press the 1 key for a morning interview, press the 2 key for an afternoon interview, or press the 3 key for the next available time. (Press either 1, 2 or 3).
Once you have selected a time, then you may press the pound (#) key to accept the time, or press the star () key to reject the time. When you press the pound (#) key, the system will play the message: An interview has been reserved for you at (time). Press the star () key to schedule an interview with another organization or the pound key to return to start.

6. Repeat steps 4 and 5 to schedule additional interviews.

Spotlight Presentations: Spotlight presentations offer valuable information about career paths, detailed position responsibilities and organizational philosophy. All students scheduling interviews are strongly encouraged to attend appropriate Spotlights. Please carefully note dates, times and locations of Spotlight presentations, as they may vary. Consult the Campus Recruitment Calendar for dates, times and locations.

Additional Placement Services: There are important services available to you at the Career Services. Please note that not all organizations and companies regularly recruit on college campuses. The list below generally reflects the high demand areas in the world of work. Please do not become discouraged if your career field is not requested. Each day, the staff of Career Services refers registered students directly to employers who have positions in a wide variety of career fields. We also assist you in conducting a job search through the following services: career and placement counseling, VIP professional vacancy hotline, job search workshops, professional development seminars, career fairs and the Falcon Career Connection. The Center for Career Resources contains a wealth of information about careers, employers and current job vacancies in ALL fields.

You'd better think twice when it comes to a friend

For a second, it seemed like the world just stopped. I noticed the silence. I felt it. And as my eyes filled with tears, I felt a pain that I hadn't felt in a little more than three years, a pain I never thought I would ever feel again.

It's a pain that almost everyone experiences at least once in a lifetime, sometimes over and over again. But no matter how many times it crosses your path, this pain is one you can never really cure no matter how hard you try, or how hard you try to forget.

A LESSON IN BUFFOONERY

I couldn't begin to explain the situation to you, as the details have become blurred through the years, and some have even escaped my mind completely. But what I can tell you is that I lost my best friend some time ago. And I was pretty sure I'd lost the memories, too, until one quiet night, someone mentioned her name.

You see, Jennifer and I had been best friends since we were kids. We lived seven houses apart, and growing up, you really couldn't mention one of us without mentioning the other. Together, we stumbled our way through the awkward junior high days and witnessed the sometimes scary changes that high school provokes. Yes, we had our fights, but somehow, once we sat back and thought about it all, they seemed trivial in comparison to the big picture.

I guess you could say that she was the only person I've ever counted on, really. Somehow I just knew that no matter what happened, she'd always be there. And that feeling is one you never really want to lose.

But like the old cliché says, all good things must come to an end. I'm not really sure if we just grew up, or grew apart, or if the problems that had consumed our world were more powerful than the bonds that held us together all those years. But somehow, on those quiet nights, I just can't help but wonder if we made the problems that split us apart into a lot more than they actually were.

Now, this isn't a Melissa and Jennifer novel, there really is a point that I'm trying to get across to everyone who has ever gone through a similar experience or who is going through the same thing.

Right now, it might seem, for whatever reason, that it's best to go your separate ways. You might think that whatever problems you and your friend have can never be reconciled. Feelings of hate, sadness, and confusion might be tricking you into throwing something away that is more precious than you know. It's not everyday, after all, that you find someone who can understand you without saying a word.

There are some times when I don't think of Jennifer at all. But sometimes when I see her drive down the street or hear her name in passing that it seems so sad that we let it all go. And for what? I really don't know. I guess that's the saddest part of all.

I haven't spoken to Jennifer in three years, and if given the chance to do so now, I'm not really sure where I'd start after all the things we said, all the things we didn't say, all the memories, the laughter, and the tears. It would probably start with I miss you, followed by I'm sorry, and although it wouldn't be quite the same, I know that pain rooted in each of us would heal somehow.

So much has changed, but I can't help but wonder if some things have stayed the same. Because the funny thing is, after all this time, it still hurts when I think about what happened. But when my friend mentioned her name that night, I still didn't hesitate to call her my friend.

BAND REVIEW

By Aaron Weisbrod

Pop quiz! To how many of you out there does the name Evolotto sound familiar?

Well if you ever owned the Atari 2600 game Bezerk, it should, because it was Bezerk's unstoppable smiley-faced villain that inspired Chris Bomlitz, Chris Sobb, and Schmid to name their band what they did, as opposed to various other names

(such as The Aborted).

Ever since April 22, 1994 the local psychedelic groove grunge trio Evolotto have been leaving audiences in awe with their extremely unique and extremely heavy genre of music that escapes any true form of classification.

"It's not metal, [and] it's not thrash, but they both influence us, as well as punk." Explained Chris, Evolotto's unbelievably talented guitar player.

"[It's] a heavy psychedelic groove. Very emotional," added Schmid, the band's bassist and singer. "It's very rhythmic-orientated. The drums play a huge part in the direction of our songs...But if [you] hate really heavy music then you aren't going to like us."

"We really don't appeal to the masses, [but] there's certain aspects that even really appeal to the Phish crowd," continued Chris, putting-in local bands on Tuesdays puts the local music showcase in direct competition with 'Freak Night' at Uptown and 'Open Mic Night' at Easystreet, which are both huge draws."

"But Madhatter and Cosmo's and The Guitar Shop are still very adamant about keeping the [music] scene." Chris added.

"[The presence of the BG music scene] depends on the local bars," Ben furthered. "Maybe if they were more supportive of the local bands [BG] would maintain some sort of scene."

Although Evolotto's cassette tape "Candied Peas" is currently sold out at Madhatter's, more copies will be available soon at the same extremely reasonable

NEW RELEASES
AVAILABLE MONDAYS AT MIDNIGHT

On Sale Monday September 25th at Midnight
New Releases from: AC/DC, U2, Overkill, Prince and David Bowie

Back then, probably not much other than a lot of noise and hopeful chatter about the one day they might make it big.

But a few months shy of two years later, all those words that were once "just talk" have turned into reality, as the same five guys, now known as State of Green, have thrust their band, and the city of Bowling Green, into the national limelight.

Tonight at midnight, State of Green, comprised of drummer, Matt Colaizzi; singer, Tony Poling; lead guitarist and background vocalist, Scott Rogers; bass guitarist, Adam Rich; and sound manager, Mark Thornton, will be performing and competing at the Cleveland Agora in the first ever LeBatts Beer live satellite battle of the bands against other bands performing in Albany, Boston, and Seattle.

That's nice, right? But here's the catch: the bands are competing for the opportunity to record a full length CD under the IRS label, as well as the chance to record a six-song promotional CD of new bands also distributed by the record company. And this was a chance many musicians never get to take.

When the band first got started, the members say it was just for fun. So how in the world did they ever get this far? A little luck? The perfect timing? Both? Probably.

"After we'd played together for a while, we made this really crummy demo tape that we only wanted our friends and us to listen to," Poling said. "At least that's what all of us wanted, except for Adam - he decided to be Superman and sent the tape to clubs."

"At first, the rest of us were not very happy about it," Poling said. "We were like, 'No, stop it.' But Adam kept on doing it."

According to Poling, the band's initial goal was to finish a song and be a typical college band. Until the one day that call finally came from Joe Robinson from the LeBatts Beer Company saying that State of Green had been selected to participate in the IRS recording contest.

"We were shocked," Poling said. "But most of all we all felt so bad about riding Adam."

In July, the band participated in the first round of competition at the Euclid Tavern in Cleveland, where they played against 5th Wheel and Hot Tin Roof, what Poling refers to as "big name bands."

"We went in there thinking, 'hey, this is cool', but we never thought we'd win because no one knew who we were," Poling said.

The bands expectations had been significantly lower than the outcome, as the band won the competition based on vocals, stage performance, originality, and overall performance ratings.

"We couldn't imagine how we had gotten that far," he said. "We just thought there must have been a higher power in the room that night."

Last month, the band participated in and won the second round of competition at the Odion, also in Cleveland. Only this time, the band won a $1,000 prize to be spent any way the band chose.

"The only way to explain the odds of winning the second time was that the same spirit must have been in the room again because we were definitely outgunned by the fans of the other two bands," Poling said.

During tonight's competition, each of the bands will have a six-minute time allotment to play one song and each band as well as the audience will have the opportunity to see each of the other bands perform on screen as well.

As of Tuesday, the band still hadn't decided which of their songs they were going to play.

"We're trying to figure out what the record company might like," Poling said. "We have an alternative/pop/punk style, so there's not really one style that we sound like. We have a few upbeat, powerful songs, but they are a little chintzy on style since they only have two chords. We have asked all of our friends their opinion, but they've all mentioned different songs. It would be a lot easier if they would have all said the same one."

Just being a part of this competition means the world to the band members, but after coming so far, you can imagine what they're dreaming about.

"Being a part of it means a lot to me. It's what I like to do and it's fun," Colaizzi said. "But damn it, we'd better win. It means a lot to come this far, so it would be really bad to have to pull away without a victory."

But if the band does not come out a victor tonight, they still plan on self-releasing a CD and promoting themselves even further, Thornton said.

"What we're going to do after the competition is something we still have to talk about," Thornton said. "If we win, we want to put out the CD and go out west and tour. If we lose, then we'll promote ourselves, get the CD out and worry about getting a record deal later."

The band encourages everyone to come to the Cleveland Agora tonight for support. But for fans who can't make the event, you can get the results of the competition and additional information about the band on the band's home page at www.buyit.com/stu/app/sog

Magic: The Conquest of Dominia

"Bolt it. Done."

"Whack ya for two. Done."

"How many cards you got? I'll take two."

"Force him to attack. Come on, you're weak."

"He's not using his assassin."

The preceding dialogue took place at Young's Newstand on a bland, school cafeteria-like table where two college-aged men are enjoying a game of Magic: The Gathering.

Magic is a card game that, since its inception a few years ago, has gained phenomenal momentum all over the country. The demand for cards is tremendous, starting a chain reaction from the storekeepers all the way up to Wizards of the Coast, the game inventors. And the Bowling Green community happens to be a prime example of the Magic frenzy.

Steve Dahms, owner of Ground Zero Comics on 188 1/2 Main St., never used to carry Magic cards until an increasing number of people started asking for them.

"So many people were asking about 'Shivan Dragons' and 'Serra Angels', I started ordering them," he said. "I remember Magic from when I worked in the electronics division at Media Play in Toledo. It had just come out and I had a big stack of them. I didn't think anything of it until they were all sold the next day."

The Magic game conceptualizes a mythic world called Dominia. Players pit their decks against each other in arcane "duel" for supremacy.

Magic is actually played with a series of three basic, interactive card types: Lands, spells, and creatures. Combatants will use the land cards to derive mana, or magical energy, to cast spells and summon creatures in order to deal points of damage to their opponent; the object being to reduce their opponent's life to zero. The individual cards are comprised of five colors: black, white, green, red and blue, although some cards are "colorless", and may be placed anywhere. Each color has its own general characteristics. Players usually play with two or three colors in any deck, which they put together themselves based on the cards they own for maximum effect. With several expansion sets available and newer cards in the making, players may enjoy hundreds of different cards.

The appeal of Magic seems to encompass four things: speed, convenience, social value and, most importantly, fun.

"It's a huge thing in (Bowling Green) because you can play it anywhere," Dahms said. "It doesn't take up much space as opposed to the larger role-playing games. You can keep it on a shelf or in a box and play it on a regular table."

Many stores sell the more valuable cards individually. Because certain powerful cards may be out-of-print or otherwise discontinued, any one card can cost close to $100. In addition, many players buy, sell, or trade cards with friends and acquaintances. For these reasons and more, many players agree that Magic is inherently addictive.

"It's a lot of fun," said Jon Van Cleve, a resident of Bowling Green. "People play a lot of money for a single card because they need it to help them to win. Everyone wants to win. I've sold cards for $50 or $60. There's certain cards I won't play without. It's like crack. I think they cook the cards in amphetamines or something."

Mike Scarlotta, a 22-year old University graduate student, agrees on the ease of becoming hooked and the profound ambition thereafter.

"There's an incredible number of mutations in the cards," he said. "It keeps it interesting. It's also exciting to trade cards and it's easy to get good deals out of people."

Often, players find two or more cards that can be used together to create a greater effect.

"I like using different combinations of cards, especially those nobody's ever seen before," said Scott Helbling is a 26-year old Bowling Green resident and sometime opponent of Scarlotta. "I see people with better cards and better decks and I want to beat them."

Oddly enough, many players begin using black cards. The properties surrounding black cards are quick death and rampant destruction.

"Black is cool," Van Cleve said. "It's moves really fast and you can destroy your opponent and his creatures faster."

Because of its immense popularity, Magic may serve as a bond between strangers.

"It's a great social scene," Scarlota said. "It's easy to find people who play. You're more likely to find people who play Magic than any other card role-playing game."

Van Cleve claimed several close friends and countless acquaintances because he happened to play Magic.

"I knew a guy who worked at (the coffee shop) Cosmo's," he said. "He worked the graveyard shift and we'd play from 2 a.m. to sunrise."

James Britt, owner of Imagine, The Unique Boutique on 134 E. Court St. and player of Magic, recalls kids who got their parents involved in the game, and adults who do the same for their spouses.

"It's addictive—but it's addictive in a nice way," he said. "I meet players all the time through the store."

Bowling Green resident Kevin Stricklem added that a player could meet another player just by browsing in any store that carries Magic.

"You can meet someone just by looking through the binders that carry the singles," he said. "Then, you start talking about it and you exchange phone numbers."

The diversity of Magic players is marked on the University campus as well.

Mike Commes is a University professor of higher education. He learned Magic last Christmas from his nephew. He currently plays with his young son.

"I've always loved gaming," he said. "Magic is playable and interesting and very collectible. Best of all, it's not a bad game, it's fun. My son's reading skills and mathematic skills have improved by reading the cards and figuring out how many points he needs to do something. There's some interesting articles from Wizards of the Coast about how Magic is used in classrooms to improve problem-solving skills."

As much as Magic is enjoyed by the masses, its astounding status has caused concern in the gaming industry, including Wizards of the Coast. Brad McDevitt is a freelance illustrator for various game companies. He has worked for Game Designs Workshop as a illustrator and has done some design. He believes that Magic has simultaneously helped and hindered the industry.

"There has been so much demand for Magic on the retail level that distributors won't even bother to order other games," he said. "As a result, many smaller game companies lost their business, some of whom have been my friends."

McDevitt explained that Magic arrived when the gaming industry was vulnerable.

"The games were becoming increasingly complex," he said. "He had to learn a lot of information and sometimes have the entire set of books to play. That's a lot of money and a lot of reading. Along comes Magic, which is eight bucks for a starter deck. It's fast—you can play a game in 25 minutes as opposed to the several hours needed to play some other games. There's only a couple pages of rules. It was the perfect remedy. The gaming industry set itself up."

McDevitt went on to defend Wizards of the Coast, saying they had no idea Magic would prove to be so lucrative.

"(Wizards of the Coast) did not expect this to happen," he said. "When Magic was first introduced, I saw a press sheet promoting their flagship game, Interstellar Combat Elite. At the bottom, there was a little blurb about Magic. It was kinda like 'oh, by the way, we have this card game, its kinda cool, we thought we'd release it.' They're very nice people and very professional people who're concerned about keeping the gaming industry healthy."

McDevitt told an anecdote of how Peter Addison, president of Wizards of the Coast, was attending a 1993 convention. He wandered around trying to coax others to play Magic with him. Unfortunately, nobody was interested.

But inevitably Magic grew, culminating in 1994, their banner year, where the demand was at its peak.

"1994 was very grim for the gaming industry," McDevitt said.

McDevitt told of a convention where merchants were offering to pay retail prices to acquire cards from other merchants, sometimes asking them to "name their price."

There is speculation that even Wizards is having problems meeting the consumer demand.

"Magic cards are printed in Belgium," Britt said. "They're having problems cranking them out fast enough. Plus, it takes time to ship them over here."

Despite the other card games that were introduced, such as Overpower and the vampire game Gyhad, Magic has remained by far the superior.

"I think it's more popular because it was first," Dahms said. "Magic was established."

Tournaments are still being run in Toledo and Southeastern Michigan. The University Gaming Society runs periodic tournaments. Imagine has been known to coordinate a few events. Players usually compete for cards.

Today, the interest has waned a little. Consumers are frustrated because they can't find the latest cards. Young's Newstand will only sell one starter deck per person in a given day. Despite the conflicts, Magic is still flowing through the social and business market. Players are avidly buying and trading either independently or through their business. Players sit across from each other winging "Terrors" or "Fireballs."

Whatever the positives and negatives might be, Magic will remain in the forefront of the gaming industry.

price, and Evolotto t-shirts will be available there within the next week.

The band will also be appearing on the upcoming compilation CD "You Don't Know Who We Are" with other area bands such as Chicken Dog, along with the Conquest video compilation "Live and Loud," which also features Jinkies, Wig, and Meanstreak.

Evolotto will be playing at Crobar (formerly Roxanne's) in Toledo on September 28 with Five Story Fall, as well as a M.S. benefit at Ralphies on Reynolds Road in Maumee on October 15 at 12:30 in the afternoon.

Although the band doesn't have a concrete date set for the release of their next recording (which will hopefully be a CD), the band is already preparing their fans for its arrival.

"When we record again, expect anything you want to expect because it's going to be very diverse. We're really going to take our time on it," Schmid said.

If there is any band in the area that can make such a claim and back it up, rest assured that it's Evolotto. If bands like Big Black, KORN, Soundgarden, Tool, Primus, and Prong truly are music to your ears, then this the band for you. Just make sure to take earplugs to their concerts, because considering the volume they play at, you'll need 'em.
